We're happy to announce a six-day, all-inclusive log-building workshop in Estonia in March 2015. This is a valuable chance to learn about Estonian carpentry both in theory and practice, from some of the country's pre-eminent builders and scholars.

Over the six-day workshop, you'll learn traditional Estonian log-building by cutting and raising a traditional smoke sauna, a small log building that is an iconic form in Estonian vernacular architecture. Workshop participants will also learn about the historical and cultural context of log-building in Estonia, and about historic buildings and restoration techniques.

The workshop curriculum includes a visit to a nearby shop specializing in traditional clay and earth plastering, a day in an open-air museum and tours of the workshops of local log-building companies.

The course will be hosted by Vanaajamaja, an Estonian non-profit organization dedicated to establishing training programs, disseminating information, and serving as a center of Estonian traditional building.

Participants are not expected to have any log building experience.

Cost: 485 euros. This price includes everything in-country: transport, tuition, accommodation, meals, organized field-trips.

Space is limited to 6 participants; please register early.
